

SUMO

SUMO, a form of wrestling, is the national sport of Japan. There is only one professional Sumo organization in the country, the Nippon Sumo Kyokai. It has about 500 members, each of who belongs to a Sumo house, often called a "stable". Professional wrestlers are called RIKISHI. At each tournament "BASHO" the wrestlers are divided into two teams, East (HIGASHI) and West (NISHI). Sumo wrestlers are ranked by two grades, Senior (MAKUNO-UCHI) and Junior (Maku-shita). The highest position in the senior division is Grand Champion (YOKOZUNA). Then come Ozeki, Sekiwake, Komusubi, and Maegashira, the lowest rank in the senior division.

The Sumo association holds Grand Sumo Tournaments six times a year in Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and Fukuoka. Tournaments are held in Tokyo during January, May and September. Each tournament lasts 15 days.

Kokugikan Hall, where the Tokyo sumo tournaments are held, is located next to Ryogoku Station on the Sobu Line. The matches begin in the morning, with the lowest ranked junior wrestlers. The big show starts after 3:00 p.m., when the higher ranked senior players begin their matches. Feel free to take pictures. On the first floor of the Kokugikan Hall there is a Sumo Museum. During the tournaments, persons with tickets to the arena may enter the museum free of charge.
